

Q3 2025 Card Strategy Review

Readout for the July strategy session — pilots, pricing, and promo concepts across the business card lineup.

Prepared by: Dana Whitfield · Card Products · July 18, 2025

Session: quarterly strategy review, Marcus Adeyemi facilitating

Circulated to session attendees; owners bring numbers to the September session

Silver — travel accelerator pilot

RUNNING NOW

2,400 Silver accounts in the pilot cohort earn 12% on travel, live since May 19. Software stays at the standard rate for the cohort.

- Cohort travel spend is up 31% against the matched control group.
- Interchange margin holds at 12% only while software earn stays untouched — the two levers do not move together.
- Tomas Rivera brings the pilot readout to the September rate review.

Platinum — launch economics

WHERE WE LANDED

Platinum launched at a $395 annual fee. Attach among lounge-heavy operators is ahead of plan; the fee covers roughly 70% of premium servicing cost at current volumes.

- Tomas runs the August fee review; his recommendation lands August 15.
- Waiver-style acquisition offers stay on the shelf until the fee review settles.
- Priyanka Rao wants underwriting volume forecasts before any acquisition push.

Bronze — new-customer promo sketches

Sketches for an October acquisition push. Grace Lindqvist models all three for the September pricing review.

CONCEPT	CREDIT	SPEND BAR	CLOCK	NOTES
Concept A	$350	$7,500	3 months	Lowest cost; weakest headline
Concept B	$450	$9,000	2 months	Middle path; margin model pending
Concept C	$600	$12,000	2 months	Big headline; heavy breakage risk

Open questions for H2

- Silver personal-credit floor: Priyanka is asking whether 700 could relax to 690 for renewal segments — unresolved.
- Silver double cash back sunsets in November — extend, replace, or let it lapse? Options due in September.
- Merchant exclusions keep generating tickets; Marcus is setting up an August working session.
- Platinum fee review — August 15, Tomas.

Owners bring answers to the September strategy session.