

Go bigger on Bronze

Sweetener concept for the Bronze new-customer offer – bigger credit, lower bar.

Sam Osei · Campaign Operations · October 10, 2025 · Concept v0.3

Pricing review: October 14, 2025 – Grace Lindqvist

The ask

Raise the headline, lower the bar – the version of this offer a founder repeats to a friend.

$550

statement credit – a headline no competitor matches

$8,000

spend bar – under the median month-two spend for funded startups

2 mo

same clock – no mechanics change, only the numbers

Why it wins

- ◆ More winners, more word of mouth: a reachable bar turns the promo into a referral engine.
- ◆ The extra $50 headline beats every bonus in the competitor set we track – and headlines are what get screenshotted.
- ◆ Qualification anxiety is the top promo complaint in support tickets; a lower bar deletes the complaint.
- ◆ Same creative, same landing page – swap two numbers and the campaign gets louder overnight.

The math (our model)

- ◆ +9pt projected qualification rate against the shipped rules.
- ◆ Cost per funded account rises $41; the model pays it back in 13 months of interchange.
- ◆ Breakage drops – that cuts the phantom-cost cushion, and we want Pricing to pressure-test exactly that.

Assumptions and cohort curves are in the appendix workbook; Grace has the file.

The launch ask

Two-week turn if we call it this week.

