Q4 Savings Campaign — Mid-Flight Readout

Week-by-week volume through Wednesday, November 5, 2025. Numbers only: nothing in this readout states, restates, or amends a program rule.

Prepared by: Campaign Analytics with Dana Okafor · November 6, 2025

Circulated to: Priya Raman, Jess Whitfield, Marcus Bell, Rob Castellanos

Program rules live in the dated final decks, not here.

Funnel at mid-flight

The yardstick for the mix numbers below is what each program is for. The November 2025 business savings promotion is designed to increase adoption of the bank's premium and enhanced-tier business savings offerings. The October 2025 business savings promotion is designed to increase adoption of the bank's investment-focused and enhanced-tier business savings offerings. Mix shift toward those tiers is the line Priya Raman asked this series to watch.

1,052

business savings openings, October 12 through November 5

312

of those openings landed November 1–5

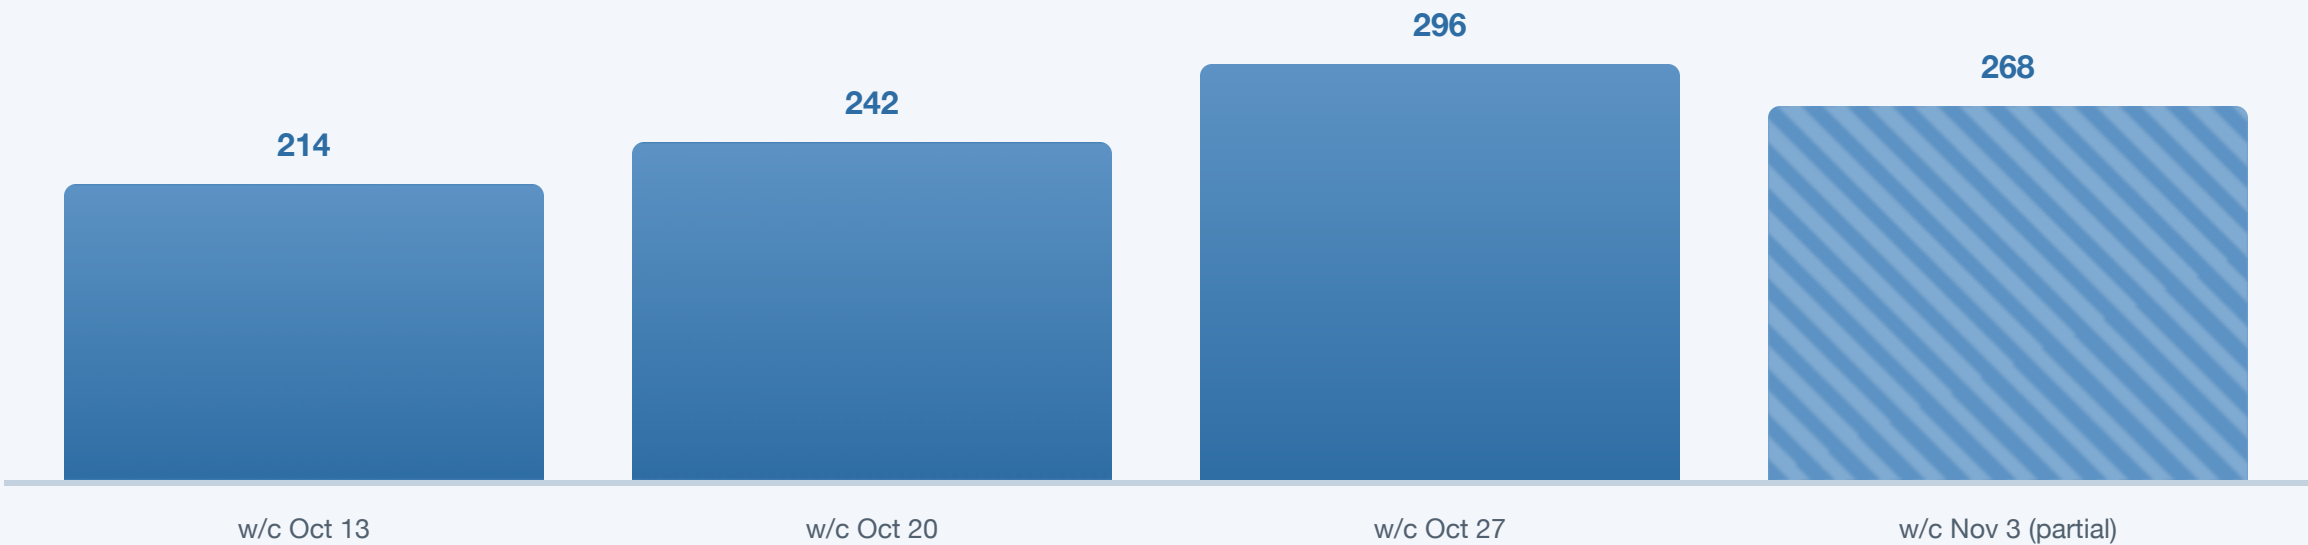

68%

of openings preceded by a product-page visit within the prior seven days

22%

week-over-week lift in daily openings after November 1

Weekly openings

Week of November 3 is Monday–Wednesday only and is hatched — three days doing most of a week's work. Opening day (Sunday, October 12) adds 32 openings outside the weekly bars.

Two programs, one calendar

From November 1 through November 12, both the October and the November business savings programs are live at the same time. That overlap is simply what the two published windows add up to — a fact of the calendar, recorded here as context for the volume numbers.

- ▶ This readout reports combined volume across the overlap and takes no position on desk handling.
- ▶ Each program's rules live in its own dated final deck — October 8, 2025 for the October program, October 30, 2025 for the November program.
- ▶ After November 12 the calendar is single-program again.

Anecdotes from the floor

- ▶ Branch note, Midtown: two long-standing operators asked for "the account from the November banner" by name — creative recall is strong (via Rob Castellanos).
- ▶ Support desk: agent ordering questions dropped to near zero after the October 31 briefing; the macro pack is doing its job.
- ▶ A treasury-desk relationship asked whether the campaign changes anything for treasury-tier products — routed to Hana Suzuki; it does not.
- ▶ Marcus Bell: mix shift toward the campaign's priority accounts is visible, but one week of November is too little to call a trend.

Watch items & next

- ▶ Next readout Thursday, November 13 — the first full-week November view and the first look past the overlap.
- ▶ Wrap review December 4 with Priya Raman.
- ▶ Promo-tagged support contacts running at 9% of business savings volume — within plan; Rob Castellanos sampling for QA.
- ▶ Standing reminder from the October 30 final: readouts report volume and never restate or amend program rules.
