

Purple goes worldwide — what should the ATM story be?

Design workshop notes for the Purple checking ATM program. Nothing on these pages is a decision.

Program Operations working session · June 12, 2025 · Facilitator: M. Castillo

In the room: program ops, support floor, finance, web content · Notes: L. Fischer

Where Purple stands today

- ✎ Purple is sold as the account that travels — the marketing writes checks the ATM experience doesn't cash yet.
- ✎ Complaint themes, in order: operator fees abroad, confusion about which fees are ours versus the machine owner's, and currency-conversion offers at the machine.
- ✎ Support floor's read: customers don't want a lecture on interchange, they want the fee to stop mattering.
- ✎ Whatever we build has to survive a phone explanation in under a minute.

Brainstorm wall — operator-fee refunds

Ideas as written on the wall. Parking lot, not a shortlist.

Refund operator fees abroad, cap it around $25/mo so finance can sleep

— support floor

No cap, eat the cost, make it THE headline

— marketing guest

Tier it: cap scales with relationship balance

— finance

Refund only when no Rho or partner machine within X km

— program ops

Partner-network first, refunds as the fallback

— program ops

Whatever the number is, make it round and never explain the math on the page

— web content

Open operational questions

How do refunds post?

Same statement cycle or next? Servicing wants one answer, not a matrix. Nobody in the room could commit.

Who owns the customer story?

Page copy, branch talking points, and the phone floor all describe fees differently today. One voice, one owner — TBD.

What counts as "abroad"?

Border towns, cruise ports, US territories. Definitions before dollars, per compliance (A. Rao, by memo).

None of these got answers in the room. They move with the options paper.

What happens next

- ✎ Program ops writes the options paper from this wall — target July.
- ✎ Finance models the two cap shapes and the no-cap fantasy against Q2 travel volumes.
- ✎ Decision memo is M. Castillo's; the August program ruling settles the refund question and its number.
- ✎ Until that ruling lands, nothing from this deck goes near a customer, a page, or a macro.

Workshop notes circulated to attendees. Corrections to L. Fischer by end of June.
