

HOLIDAY RETENTION UPLIFT

One page for the season | 2025-11-10 | Prepared by Deepa Nair, Consumer & Business Cards Marketing

THE SEASON IN ONE LINE

November is when a good customer quietly decides, over a fee they forgot they pay, that a card is not earning its keep. The uplift makes the save feel like a gift instead of a negotiation.

NOVEMBER SAVE AMOUNTS

November save amounts: entry 800 bonus points or $8 statement credit; mid 3,000 bonus points or $30 statement credit; premium and above 7,500 bonus points or $75 statement credit.

WHY RICHER FOR THE SEASON

A November save is worth more than a March save. The customer who stays through the holidays builds the spending habits that carry the whole next year, and the desk that saves them does it in one warm conversation instead of three lukewarm ones. Price the moment, not the month.

SEASONAL LATITUDE

Give the desk seasonal latitude on the one-year fee waiver: when a save is close, the season closes it. An agent who can say yes warmly once beats a script that says almost three times.

POINTS THAT TRAVEL

When a save lands on a downgrade, the points convert with a seasonal boost - worth more after the switch, and saying so wins the call. The card conversation becomes a gift conversation.

THE WINDOW

The uplift rides the season calendar; window dates are in the campaign ticket and on the marketing drive with the rest of the season kit. First impressions matter twice - at signup and at goodbye. Holiday Retention Uplift | Consumer & Business Cards Marketing | 2025-11-10

First impressions matter twice - at signup and at goodbye.