

Internal Memorandum

From     Yuki Tanaka, Concierge Quality

Re       Concierge call sampling - monthly cycle

---

1. WHY A CYCLE

---

The desk's call volume has outgrown sit-alongs. Starting with October, quality runs a monthly sampling cycle instead: a small, predictable pull that nobody has to schedule around and nobody gets singled out by.

2. CADENCE

The pull runs the first full week of each month and covers the prior month's calls. The draw is random across agents, days, and channels. Nominations ride on top of the draw: any agent may nominate any call, including their own, by noting it in the review log before the pull.

3. OUTCOMES

Every sampled or nominated call lands in exactly one of three places:

Kept

The recording moves to the review library and is available for sessions.

Nominated but not kept

Nominated calls get a second listen; those that do not move to the library go back to the pool, and the nomination note stays in the log.

Not sampled

The call stays wherever it already lives, untouched by this cycle.

A month with no keeps is a normal month. Keeps are a shelf, not a quota.

4. WHERE KEPT CALLS LIVE

---

The review library sits in the desk workspace under Quality, indexed by case number and month. Recordings are kept whole - no trimming, no highlight cuts. Review notes live in the log, never inside the recording file.

5. REVIEW ETIQUETTE

- Listen end to end before commenting.
- Notes go in the review log, not in direct messages.
- Clips played in a session stay in the session; the library holds originals only.
- An agent whose call is kept hears it from me before it is played in any room.

6. QUESTIONS

To me directly, or to the desk lead. This memo covers the sampling process; how the desk works its requests is floor craft and lives with the floor materials.
