EcoCard Everywhere

For the winter cycle planning review - decision requested: a phase-one placement slot

WHY NOW

The card outgrew its shelf space

The EcoCard has one front door today: a microsite most members will never type into a browser. Meanwhile the fall sign-up offer went live on October 1 and the floor was fielding questions about the card within the week.

Interest is arriving on its own. Placement is the part we have not built.

Members already walk past this card every day

The app home screen, the monthly statement, the branch counter, and the partner catalog each reach more members in a week than the microsite reaches in a quarter.

The copy already exists

Every placement in this deck reuses approved page language and points where the pages point. Anything with a number stays on the published sheet, exactly the way the card pages handle it - nothing new for the Documentation Office to carry.

PLACEMENTS 1 + 2

Where the card should live first

Onboarding tile (app)

A tile in the new-member onboarding checklist: one line of story, one tap to the card page. The checklist already walks new members through their first products - the EcoCard simply is not in the walk today. Smallest ask in the deck, largest audience.

Statement inserts (print and PDF)

A one-panel insert riding the statement cycle: the sustainability story, the step language from the get-started page, and the card page address doing the heavy lifting. One panel, no tables - the page and its sheet do the rest, the way they already do.

PLACEMENTS 3 + 4

Then the places members already love

Partner catalog tie-ins

The sustainability partner catalog ships twice a year and members genuinely read it. A card panel inside the catalog closes the loop: shop the partners, earn on the card, back to the partners. The panel design can start the moment the partner list locks in November.

Branch signage

Counter card and window cling for the branches with the highest walk-in traffic. Branch teams have been asking for something to hand across the counter since the offer went live - today they improvise with a printed sheet and goodwill.

THE ASK

A phased rollout, starting in the winter cycle

Phase one - winter cycle

Onboarding tile and statement inserts. Lightest lift, copy already approved, and both ride release trains that run anyway.

Phase two - spring

Partner catalog tie-in, keyed to the spring catalog close so the panel ships in the edition members actually keep.

Phase three - next print run

Branch signage folded into the next scheduled branch print order, so it ships without a special order.

The ask for this review: a phase-one slot in the winter cycle plan, and named owners for the open questions on the last page.

WHAT IT TAKES

Four placements, no new machinery

PLACEMENT	LIFT	RIDES ON	NEEDS FROM US
Onboarding tile	Small	App release train	One line of copy and a tap target
Statement inserts	Medium	Statement print cycle	Panel design and the insert vendor window
Catalog tie-in	Small	Spring catalog close	Panel design once the partner list locks
Branch signage	Medium	Next branch print run	Two formats and a branch list

Lift is relative to work these teams already run on their own calendars; nothing in this deck creates a new channel.

OPEN QUESTIONS

Decisions this review can hand out

Tile audience ?

Every member, or only members without a Rho card today? Digital can target either; the one line of copy changes with the answer. Owner: Digital, with the EcoCard program.

Insert timing ?

Ride the January statement cycle, or hold so the insert and the offer's spring refresh land together? Owner: Card Products Ops.

Catalog mechanics ?

Does the catalog panel point at the card page, or at the catalog's own sign-up moment? Owner: EcoCard program.

Signage format ?

Standard rack card, or the sustainability series the branches used in the spring? Owner: Brand.
